America's Army: The Strength of the Nation

AUSA + 2nd Session, 110th Congress = Very Good News, But . . .

Repeatedly tested in this era of persistent conflict, Soldiers have emerged stronger, with a deeper commitment to the Army's core values and beliefs. The era of persistent conflict means persistent engagement in which the demands on the Army—especially its people—will remain high. A well-trained, well-led, adaptive American Soldier—the most potent weapon in the nation's landpower arsenal—must be ready to execute full-spectrum operations alongside joint, multinational and interagency partners.

The Second Session, 110th Congress recognized the demands on Soldiers and their families and worked to restore the readiness of ground forces, which have been strained by extended deployments worldwide, especially in Iraq and Afghanistan. The Army received more than $8.5 billion to replace or repair equipment, with the reserve component receiving $800 million for additional equipment. The 3.9 percent pay raise marks the eighth consecutive year in which pay for servicemembers exceeded the average increase in private-sector wages. This session also authorized programs to help military spouses with degrees/credentials/licenses to pursue portable careers and expanded preventive health care provisions in TRICARE. And the Post-9/11 G.I. Bill greatly expanded and enhanced the educational benefits provided to those who have served.

Yet challenges remain to meet demands for ground forces and to sustain Soldiers, families and Army civilians as well as to retain hard-earned veteran and retiree benefits. While this session of Congress blocked Department of Defense efforts to offset rising health care costs at the expense of retirees, it did not make necessary decisions on how to ensure affordable health care for those who, even after retirement, continue to serve as key influencers helping to encourage and sustain the nation's all-volunteer force. It did not offer any additional provisions for other categories of concurrent receipt and failed to make retroactive to 11 September 2001 the provisions that reduce the age at which reserve component personnel receive retired pay by three months for every aggregate 90 days of active duty service in support of a contingency operation.

To preserve the all-volunteer force, restore necessary depth and breadth to Army capabilities and build essential capacity now and for the future, it is imperative that the Army continues to grow, rebalance and transform itself—and to receive the necessary resources to do so. Soldiers—the centerpiece of the Army—their families and Army civilians deserve nothing less as they serve and protect the nation.

Here are some of the major objectives for the last legislative session:

AUSA and others spoke out for:

- Providing a modernized G.I. Education Bill for a new "greatest generation" of servicemembers
- Increasing active Army endstrength to 700,000
- Closing the pay gap between Soldiers and the private sector and providing pay increase parity for Department of the Army civilians

Congress responded by:

- Authorizing the Post-9/11 G.I. Bill for service-members who have active duty service of at least 90 days since 10 September 2001 that provides up to 36 months of tuition benefits at any public university, provides a generous housing and books stipend, eliminates the $1,200 enrollment fee, expands the post-service eligibility usage period by five years, and allows some servicemembers to transfer their benefits to a spouse or child
- Temporarily authorizing active Army endstrength up to 532,400 and to 547,400 by 2010 but without base budget funding
- Decreasing the current pay gap by approving a January 2009 pay raise of 3.9 percent for military personnel and pay increase parity for Department of the Army civilians
